Puns and Coffee

By DUNKEM

College has a lot of different ways of affecting people. To some it brings dignity; others find out how little they know—maybe by the time they're seniors; and still others are bigger fools when they get through than when they started (Now, don't anyone take offense at this; You know what class you belong in). After final examinations last week the Western students went wild. Everyone played marbles—especially Mary Lee Travstead. "Choo" Walton was playing jacks with four or five of her many boy friends. Mabel Lynn proved herself best roller-skater around (and down, too). Someone should see Dr. Billings about the psychological effects of exams. But, as I said above, that's the college influence.

Since I've started preaching this week I may as well get all the advice out of my system. There have been some complaints (perfectly nice ones) about how this column has neglected the B. U. students. Advice No. 1: Now all you Bug unionites had better develop some peculiarities that Dunkem can take notice of. Dunkem isn't partial, because he goes to both schools, and likes them both.

Comments of a Dream Walker: I went up to register at Western the other morning and was afraid that any minute someone would ask me where I'd been teaching during the past year. Farnk Warder has the most distinctive mannerisms of anyone. I spent five minutes the other day trying to convince Mary Belle Fitch over the telephone that it was really I that was talking to her, and never did. She thought it was a joke. Some people probably do consider me a joke. Hitlerish: Fred Mutchler's haircut, Maurice Lisagor has the most nervous laugh, and Bill Bass looks like the "big, bad wolf" in his new overcoat. Jack Keen Robey of Franklin is my idea of a modern Don Juan. Oo-la-la: Dorothy Perry. Pet antipathy of the week: people that stare absent-mindedly into space when you're telling them what you think is a good story. "Doc" Seivers says there isn't any probability about people considering me a joke. Cherubic: Shorty Butler, most individual looking girl: Virginia Womack. Ideal couple: Margaret Sovine and Wop Corum.

Next week, children, this column will do an imitation of Gurney Williams, the joke professor. And they're all aged in the wood. Cheerio—

OLD FACES RETURN

A great number of once familiar faces are seen around the Business University again as former students have enrolled for the second semester.

Among them are Jake Carrish, of Pennsylvania; Jack Nowell, Mississippi; D. M. Holmes, Mississippi; Ottelia Easton, Kentucky; Robert Brock, Mississippi; Dolly Wathen, Kentucky; Joe Romine, Kentucky; Margaret Bailey, Kentucky; Hilary Carroll, Tennessee; Betsy Pell, Kentucky; Mabel Routt, Kentucky; Mrs. Ethel Austin, Kentucky; Harvey T. Powell, New York.

TICKET SELLERS ARE ASKED FOR REPORTS

Persons selling tickets for "Kempy," Welfare Home benefit play to be given Friday evening, are urged to make a report of the number sold Friday morning at the office of the Kentucky-Tennessee Light & Power Company on State street.

There will be someone at the office at that time to receive the tickets. It is stated it is very important for these reports to be made as soon as possible and by no means later than Friday.

"TOWERS" GETTING WELL UNDER WAY

Management Announce A Splendid Outlook For '34 Issue of B. U. Annual

With the greater portion of advertising sold in the 1934 issue of the "Towers," B. U.'s Annual, the management announce an exceptionally fine issue is in the offing. There will be some space reserved by those interested, but a large portion of the advertising has already been disposed of.

An interesting contest is being held among the different clubs and organizations of the school to promote the sale of the annual. Present information, as the minute details of the project has not been worked out, give the tentative plan that each club or organization which is responsible for the disposing of a certain number of annuals, will receive two pages in the publication, for that particular group, free.

At the present time copy is being gathered and compiled pending the formal start, in the near future. Advertising copy will also be gotten within the course of a week or two, and compilation will then begin in earnest.

Subscriptions are now being accepted but the usual publication date of some time in early June will be adhered to.

The "Towers" staff of '34 is as follows:

Frank Cheritti Editor-in-Chief
Bud Sumner Ass't Editor
Kenard Morrison Business Mgr.
Ward Long Subscription Mgr.
Ruby Austin Subscription Mgr.
Davis Merritt Sales Mgr.

SENIOR CLASS PARTY

The Senior Class of Western will have a party for its members tonight at the Cedar House.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Madeline Chaney, Ewell Waddle, Tom Hobbs and Harry Booker.

Caution

Paul—I am a candidate for your hand.

Pauline—All right. But be careful about your campaign promises.

Colorful Birthday Ball Here Is Attended By 1,358 Persons

ANNIVERSARY OF PRESIDENT OBSERVED WITH BRILLIANT SOCIAL GATHERING AT PHYSICAL EDUCATION BUILDING AT WESTERN TUESDAY NIGHT

By BILL WARREN

Probably the most colorful community event in the history of Bowling Green, and, certainly the greatest ball ever given here, marked the local contribution Tuesday evening to the nation's birthday party honoring President Franklin D. Roosevelt on the fifty-second anniversary of his birth.

The local program was given at the Physical Education Building of Western Teachers College, officials of the institution contributing the huge hall and the music for the occasion.

There were 1,358 tickets taken up at the doors, the ticket committee reported this morning. It is believed the total sale will be close to the 1,500 mark, as a number of places selling tickets in the downtown district had not reported today.

It is thought a full report will be possible soon, W. L. Hall, chairman of the local committee, said Wednesday.

As usual, the town's "meanest" man was in attendance, the report of the ticket committee revealed, and it is believed that he had a "date." Evidence of this fact became known

PRESIDENT'S WEIGHT AT BIRTH NOT KNOWN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—The nation celebrated President Roosevelt's birthday Tuesday without having data on one important fact—how much he weighed when he was born.

Reason: scales were scarce in those days. Right at first he wasn't weighed. Later, he was taken down and weighed on the scales on the butcher's cart. The butcher is dead.

EXPECT MANY OUT TO BENEFIT PLAY OF WELFARE HOME

Sales Captains Report Large Ticket Sales For Showing Of "Kempy"

According to reports by sales captains the second production of "Kempy" when it is given by the Dramatic Club of Western Kentucky Teachers College at the college auditorium February 2 will eclipse the former success.

The splendid reception of this comedy of American life, as portrayed by the Stagecrafters, is indicative of the excellence both of the play, the setting and the actors. Tickets have been sold in business houses and by canvassing. Many local firms and organizations have purchased tickets for their entire staff. No expense is attached to this production, as even the programs and tickets are being donated by two of the local banks. A philanthropic person has paid the $25 royalty fee of the play.

Backers of the play state, "It is a rare opportunity to witness such a delightful play and at the same time contribute to the worth of the Welfare Home. Bowling Green is indeed a modern humanitarian city from the viewpoint of its splendid Welfare Home. The part it is playing in the program of financial reconstruction is indeed a worthy one. Various projects of the CWA program are being carried out at the Welfare Home and with its assistance.

DR. A. J. LYNN

NEW INSTRUCTOR AT BUS. UNIVERSITY

Dr. O. C. Williams Leaves And Dr. A. J. Lynn, Of Louisville Replaces Him

There was a change at the opening of this semester in the teaching force at the Business University. O. C. Williams, who has been with the institution for eighteen months as teacher of accounting, was offered a position as an accountant with a shoe manufacturing company in Nashville. The position demanded a man of extraordinary ability and gave preference to one with a C. P. A. degree. Mr. Williams and his wife, who have been living at the Holmes apartments on Twelfth street, left Bowling Green for Nashville Tuesday morning.

Dr. A. J. Lynn, holding a C. P. A. degree and who was at the head of an accounting firm in Louisville has been engaged to take Mr. Williams' place. Dr. Lynn is not a stranger here. He attended both of the local institutions and later taught for several years in the Business University.

Dr. Lynn is now in charge of several classes. For the present his family will remain in Louisville.

ENROLLMENT IS SATISFACTORY AT BUSINESS UNIV.

New Term Is Under Way With Bright Prospects

Seemingly one of the significant things indicative of better days is the enrollment at the Business University, which is unusually good. Since last Friday morning young men and women from various states have been enrolling, and today the attendance seems to be at a high mark. Young people evidently know that the demand for trained help is not only sure to be a great deal better soon, but is already better.

Enrollments have been made from Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, West Virginia, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Pennsylvania and New York.

Several students completed their courses at the close of last week and withdrew from school, but a great many more new ones came in, so those enrolling far outnumber those withdrawing. New classes organized, new schedules have been set up, new social events arranged, the debating societies are in full swing, and every activity about the University is at its best.

A very successful school term for the spring of 1934 is assured.

WESTERN'S COLLEGE FOUNDATION FUND

Another Interesting And Enlightening Article On the Start and Importance of the Foundation.

R. M. Seward, secretary and treasurer of Western Teachers College Foundation Fund has kindly written another article on this organization.

Mr. Seward has conducted his office in the work of the Fund in a very commendable manner and this article amply demonstrates his keen perspective of not only its beginning but the importance of the organization in the need of college life.

The Students' Weekly take pleasure in reproducing it herewith:

The Strategic Element

The genius of opportunity is in its strategic element. It was an opportune moment in the life of the community and of the state when the College Heights Foundation made its appearance. The state's treasury was at a low ebb, and pecuniary assistance in the way of current expense maintenance and appropriations for the school seemed wholly inadequate. The Normal was in process of being converted into a Teachers College. There was a crying need for teachers with degrees to teach in the high schools of Kentucky. This condition generated in the minds of students a desire to remain in school and continue their professional and academic training. It also entailed upon them the necessity and responsibility of borrowing money. The Foundation thus became a God-send in the lives of many students.

There is a strategy in Providence. Schools, like individuals, have their crisis hours. God operates upon the plastic substance of the individual mentality and in this way reveals His infinite plans and purposes. At the opportune time He raised up a great man and stamped His image and superscription upon the hot and glowing heart of a great movement. The College Heights Foundation. This man was none other than our revered President, Dr. H. H. Cherry. Thus it may be seen that there is a Providence that works out the destiny of great movements as well as the destiny of individuals. "There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may." It is readily discernable, therefore, that there was a strategic element enfolded in the launching of The College Heights Foundation.

Great projects in the interest of social weal and economic justice do not come into being of their own accord, but are the result of individual and collective effort. They have their origin in, and are the outgrowth of, well-defined mental forces and laws operating upon enlightened individual human units who are themselves receiving stations for the radio messages of a higher power. Receptivity to great messages in the interest of human advancement is always contingent upon one's ability to interpret and reduce them to an orderly system for the benefit of human society. Progress is measured in terms of mankind's response to, and utilization of, these invisible mental forces and laws operating in the interest of the general welfare.

The College Heights Foundation proved to be no exception to this rule. It was mentally conceived and brought forth at the opportune time. It was neither behind the time nor in advance of the time. It was at the point where it must become an outstanding agency for good in the life of the school, the community, and the state, or lapse into a condition of innocuous destitute. Knowing the history of its conception, there appeared to be no doubt that its mission and purpose

Ida Mae Is Sore Because Her Job As Miner Halted

Woman Who Had Worked in Pits 22 Years, Is Made To Quit

CADIZ, O., Jan. 29.—(P)—Ida Mae Stull, who has worked in a coal mine since she was 12, is angry because the State of Ohio now forbids her from doing "manual" labor.

"They haven't got any more right to take me from the mines than they have takin' your wife from the kitchen," Miss Stull, now 34, asserts.

"Ever since I was 12, I have worked in a mine. I helped my dad open his mine and have cut props, dug entries, loaded coal, shot it down and hauled it out—and now the Columbus mine men say I'm not made to be a coal miner and ought to stay in the house and mend clothes."

Inspector Finds Her

She was discovered by Andrew Mullen, deputy mine inspector, working in a Harrison county mine back in the hills. She was wearing overalls, boots, cap and a carbide lamp, and was just finishing loading a car of coal.

Miners who know her say she's the equal of any of them, loading an average of five tons a day with pick and shovel.

The deputy inspector reported her to James Berry, Chief of Ohio's Bureau of Mines. Berry ordered her removed. "Ohio laws forbid women working in mines," he said. Today Miss Stull was washing dishes—"Baby work," she called it. "Why I feel like taking a club to them! Idea of telling me I can't work in a mine because I'm not able. I can load more coal than any man in Harrison county. Didn't I dig the well here at the house, and didn't I dig a cistern, and didn't I raise 100 bushel of potatoes last year? And then worked in the mine, too!"

"Wish I was back under the hill with a pick and shovel in my hands," she said—and went on wiping dishes.

Might Improve It

"Hey, the property man is drunk and is banging up the scenery." "He has just ruined a castle. I don't see how he can do any harm there."

Alive Because Gun "Jammed"

"Jamming" of this riot gun saved the life of H. R. Lininger, Miami county, Kansas, deputy shown holding it, and cost the life of Bob Brady, co-leader in the recent Kansas state prison break. Brady, cornered in a cornfield near Paola, Kan., had the drop on the deputy, but his weapon failed to work and Lininger shot him down.

COLLEGE GRILL OPENS

The former Coffee Pot, located at 13th and Center streets, has been recently purchased and opened for business under the name of the "College Grill."

Jack Farmer and Bland Coffman, outstanding athletes of Western Teachers College, are the new operators and they announce they intend to operate the Grill on the highest plane possible.

Plans are under way to renovate the interior so as to offer a very pleasing appearance, the management announce. They are also catering especially to the student bodies of both schools.

would be achieved in due process of time.

A strategic element was likewise wrapped up in the life of the student-body of the institution as it was intimately related to the school through its daily activities and associations. The strategic condition in the life of the school that served as a haven was that memorable occasion at chapel exercises when the students, en masse, with one accord, pledged one hundred percent loyalty to the Foundation, the institution's legitimate child, and agreed wholeheartedly to nourish and support it during the stage of its infantile existence, not only with their moral influence but with their pocketbooks as well.

How sublime was their act of patriotism and benevolence and how far-reaching in the scope of influence was the precedent which they established! The spirit of their loyalty and devotion will have a salutary influence upon those who come after them. The protestations of their faith in the opportuneness of this great movement and their willingness to support it will reverberate down the corridors of time into eternity. It is impossible to obliterate from the record book of worthy deeds the magnanimous quality of their contributions. They have been tried and not found wanting. They recognize the strategic elements enfolded in the opportunity to do something worthwhile for a grand and glorious cause, one which had its origin and beginning in the unseen realm of thought before it was manifested outwardly in a concrete way and clothed with objective existence.

When one is able to visualize the future and bring it into the present, he is stimulated with hope and inspiration; his outlook upon existence and things in general grows more and more optimistic; his thoughts naturally gravitate away from fear and doubt as to the ultimate outcome of his ability to accomplish his legitimate and laudable ambitions, and his life henceforth becomes one of triumphal achievements—a series of continuous developments toward the realization of higher, nobler, and more worthwhile achievements.

The purpose and mission of the Foundation is to look with penetrating eyes into the future and to interpret it, in terms of the more abundant life, for the benefit of needy and ambitious students. That it is succeeding in its efforts to do this is vouchsafed by a large and ever-increasing body of young men and women who have heeded its voice and became the recipients of its benevolent ministrations.

Those in charge of the Foundation are very optimistic over its future. This optimism is expressed in the following stanza:

From glory unto glory, with no limit and no veil,
With wings that cannot weary, and hearts that cannot fail;
Within, without, no hindrance, no barrier as we soar;
And never interruption to the endless more and more.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB MEETS

The Cosmopolitan Club of the Bowling Green Business University held its regular meeting Monday evening.

Officers for the coming semester were elected: president, Robert Summer; vice president, Loyd I. Vanderpool; secretary - treasurer, Janie Hildreth; reporter, Annah Mae Austin.

The club is doing an excellent work in the school, so all Cosmopolitans are urged to be out for the next meeting, February 12, and boost their club.

MY SHIPS

I once did own a fleet of ships
Upon a sea of blue,
One was hope and one was faith
And one was love for you.

I set my ships to sail away
Upon a silver sea,
I laughed and said I'd gladly wait
Till they came back to me.

They sailed away one starlit night
To touch a distant port,
Their crew was all my golden dreams
Their captain was my heart.

A sweet wind then began to blow
And sped them gently on,
I looked into the dawning East
And lo! my ships were gone.

I've waited now these many years
I've watched the seven seas.
But my ships, my ships, my silver ships,
Have never come back to me.

Somewhere upon that silver sea
Where my ships chanced to stray,
Bold pirates must have roamed those seas,
And took my ships away.

CANZONERI TO QUIT UNLESS HE DEFEATS LOCATELLI, HE SAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Tony Canzoneri says he'll quit the ring if he doesn't beat Cleto Locatelli, Italian lightweight, in their 12-round bout in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

"If I'm defeated," says Tony, who has held the featherweight and lightweight championships during his brilliant career, "I'll hang up my gloves for good. But if I win I'll hound Barney Ross for another chance to regain the lightweight title."

Canzoneri has earned at least a quarter-million during his professional career, begun in 1925.

Western Grabs Double Header From Quintets of Tennessee College

Varsity Wins 52 To 29, While Frosh Take 29 To 17 Decision Monday Night—U. of L. Beaten Wednesday

WESTERN grabbed both ends of a double bill from the Middle Tennessee Teachers at Murfreesboro Monday night the varsity winning 52 to 29 and the frosh taking a 29 to 17 decision, to repeat victories scored by the local teams over the Tennesseans on the home floor earlier in the month.

Middle Tennessee offered stiff resistance during the first half, which ended 16 to 15 in Western's favor, but the Hilltoppers evidently had merely been waiting for a street car, or something. At any rate, they went to work with a will in the final period and, before the Murfreesboro boys knew the game had resumed, had tallied 16 points. From then on it was just a breeze.

Brad Mutchler, the youngster who was too slow to make the team, in the opinion of some of the pre-season dopesters, rang the bell for 16 points to lead the Hilltoppers, but he was not far ahead of Harry Hardin, the other half of a scoring combination that has caused plenty of woe for Western opponents this year. Harry tallied 13 for second place, five points ahead of his sidekick, Bernard Hickman, who lacked just one point of making as many as the highest scorer on the Murfreesboro outfit—a substitute by the name of Mansfield, who chalked up nine.

In the frosh game, Garland (Red) Garrison, who, like Mutchler is a local product, showed the way with 15 points. Max J. Reid, whose so-

He Probes 'Candy With a Kick'

It seems that buyers were getting too much of a kick from those two-cent cocktail candies in Philadelphia. After analyzing the confection, Dr. Joseph W. E. Harrison (above), state chemist, found that a dozen of the candies contained the equivalent of a shot of liquor. Because school children were among the consumers, charges were to be brought against four jobbers, one shopkeeper.

Journal in the game was of short duration, tallied six to take second place in the scoring column for the winners, while Thomas, with half a dozen, was best for the Tennesseans.

'Toppers Beat Cards, 43-34

Western turned on in earnest against the Cardinals of University of Louisville here Wednesday night to give the visitors their second State S. I. A. A. defeat of the season. The score was 43 to 34.

Bradford Mutchler, Western, and Harry Long, Louisville, waged a scoring battle in which the Hilltopper ace came out ahead by just one point as a result of his foul-shooting proficiency. Mutchler tallied his five field goals on craps while Long shot his six from far out in the court, but Mutchler connected for four straight gratis shots while Long could get but one.

The entire Western team played great ball, with Hardin, Hickman and Hobbs helping Mutchler materially in scoring. Long, Willig and Giannini were best for the visitors.

STING OF A BEE IS VERY INTRICATE AFFAIR

A bee's sting is very complicated, according to R. E. Snodgrass, American entomologist, who says that a bee's sting is the modification of an organ common to the insect race—the ovipositor with which the female deposits the eggs. Countless ages have changed this into an effective natural weapon.

Approximately twenty-two muscles are required to complete an ordinary sting (The number slightly larger if the queen bee does the stinging) and the act involves three separate sets of movements. First, the outward thrust of the sting; second, depression of the sting; and last, action of the lancets on the sting which drives it farther into the flesh of the victim. Reaction of the sting is brought about by a contraction and expansion of the abdomen, which acts like a bulb. A poison-secreting organ opens directly into the channel of the sting and valvular lobes drive the liquid poison through it.

Ultimatum

The vicar of an East London parish was asked if he would perform the marriage ceremony for "certain flamboyant movie actress." "Yes, I'll marry her. But no electric lights over the church door."
